Permission to digitize documents

The digital transformation of print documents provides for a plethora of benefits and opportunities. The importance of digitizing our print works will be crucial for our future as a collective. We are confident that you will appreciate the need for digitizing efforts to be completed by adopting proper legal procedures. With this purpose in mind and to provide for wide spread open access to knowledge this document has been put together.

Conditions:

1. Permission is granted to digitize print works and documents. No permission is granted to represent/reproduce works. Such rights shall remain with the original copyright holder. Noolaham Foundation shall not take responsibility for the views expressed in the work or documents so digitized and they continue to remain the views of the author of the work or documents.
2. Permission is also granted to place any such digitized work on world-wide-web or the Internet or any other electronic data bases which would be accessible to the members of the public or any other interested persons.
3. The digitized print work may not be used for any profit related commercial purpose without copyright holder's permission.
4. During the process of digitizing Noolaham Foundation shall make no alterations to the original in print. Noolaham Foundation shall strive to maintain the integrity of the work digitized subject to the necessary format related amendments/alterations to make it compatible to electronic form and make access to the digitized material user friendly to the potential users.
5. Noolaham Foundation shall take all necessary steps to ensure that the digitized material made available on electronic medium is not tampered with or altered by any user of the material. However, it is also understood that Noolaham Foundation is not responsible for any possible infringement of the integrity of the work by any third party who is an innocent user or willful violator of the work.
6. The person or institution which is granting the permission to Noolaham Foundation to digitize the below mentioned material or work warrants that the permission granted hereby is not in violation or infringement of any person's copyright over the said material or work and that the person or institution shall warrant and defend the right to digitize the work or material below referred to.
7. The digitized work shall not be subject to any technology that seeks to restrict and/or monitor usage (Ex DRM). The digital work should be able to be operated with open source related software.
